BRITISH EXTENDING FRONT, SAYS MASON

Expert Doubts, However, If Report of Stretching One Hundred Miles Is True.

By J. W. T. MASON.

NEW YORK, Sept. 11.-The British cont in Belgium and France is being extended and French troops that have held the western trenches for nearly a year are now being released for work

The British line until lately measured about thirty miles, running from north of Ypres to the southern environs of La Rassee. It is usual to reckon a man to a foot, in estimating the number of troops required to hold entrenched positions. The British front of thirty miles, therefore, needed about 150,000 men. Two months ago it became known that the British had at least between 400,000 and 500,000 troops in France. This number was sufficient to stretch the British line to approximately 100 miles. British line to approximately 100 miles.

British line to approximately 100 miles, for purely defensive purposes.

Reports are now circulating that in fact the British at present hold a full hundred miles of western trenches. In all probability, however, these rumors are much exaggerated. The entire western front from the North Sea to Colssons, where the line turns to the east, measures scarcely more than 125 miles. That the British dominate this line to the extent of helding 50 per cent of it. That the British dominate this line to the extent of holding 80 per cent of it is highly improbable. If the French have been solargely relieved of guard-ing the western trenches, it is inexpli-cable how the Germans this week have been able to make quite respectable gains in the Argonne.

The British possibly have stretched their line twenty miles, so that it now may terminate south of Arras, but they may terminate south of Arras, but they have scarcely done more than this, if indeed, as much. A moderate redistribution along the western front might well be arranged not only for sentimental reasons, but also to permit the French to pursue more effectively their offensive in Alsace. But, a large replacement by British troops will probably not occur until the ammunition

Hunting Trouble.

When a man just naturally wants trouble it is mighty easy to find an excuse for making it. According to Mike Hogan, Casey and O'Brien were having an argument of their own It had progressed to the extent that each had forgotten what it was about originally and they were wholly obliv lous of the gathering crowd until an urbane and genteel person in a frock

"Come, come, my man." he said, gent by plucking Casey by the sleeve. "You den't want to fight, I can tell it by your Two be nine! Two be nine is ut, ye "Two be nine! Two be nine is ut, ye rout?" bellowed Casey. "Me face is two be nine, 's ut"."

And there was where the real trouble Your face is too benignbegan.-Louisville Times.

Pat's Information.

One day, as Pat halted at the top of the river bank, a man famous for his inquisitive mind stopped and asked: "How long have you hauled water for the village, my good man?"

'Tin rears, ser. "Ah, how many loads do you take in

"From tin to fifteen, sor."
"Ah, ves! Now I have a problem for the How much water at this rate have hauled in all?" he driver of the watering cart jerked his thumb backward toward the river and replied: "All the water yes don't see there now, sor."-Fittsburgh Dispatch.
